Response to Amendment

1. Applicant's amendment and arguments of February 17, 2010 have been entered and fully considered.
2. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. Claims 1-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Allison et al. in view of Bearden et al.

Allison et al. discloses a method for thermally protecting an electric motor in an electric sprayer having a control and a temperature, and which operates to maintain a user-selected controlled pressure, the method comprising: monitoring the temperature of the electric motor via temperature sensor 56; and terminating pump operation in response to a high temperature from the sensor 56. Allison et al. do not disclose a variable speed sprayer or continuing to spray when the electric motor exceeds a predetermined level. Bearden et al. teaches a method of thermally protecting the electric motor of an electrical pump 11 by monitoring the temperature within the pump and reducing the operational speed of the pump when an abnormally high pump temperature is experienced so that the pump can still operate while it cools down wherein the pressure will be reduced as the pump speed is reduced, thus making a variable speed sprayer. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have modified the device of Allison et al. by providing the capability for reducing the pressure but also continue spraying when the electric motor temperature exceeds a predetermined level as taught by Bearden et al. so the sprayer can still operate while it is cooling down. Regarding claim 5, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art that when the motor temperature exceeds a first level, the pressure of the device would be reduced as the pump speed is reduced while still continuing to spray so that the device can cool as taught by Bearden et al. and that the control of the motor would change to on/off control by shutting off when the motor temperature exceeds a second level as the final precautionary step to avoid serious damage to the motor, wherein the second temperature is higher than the first.

Response to Arguments

4. Applicant's arguments filed February 17, 2010 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. The device of Allison et al. monitors the temperature and pressure of the pump and shuts down the pump operation if certain temperature and pressure thresholds are exceeded and the teaching of Bearden provides the teaching of instead of shutting down the pump completely, the pump is operated at a reduced speed while the pump motor cools. A reduction of pump speed will result in a reduction of the controlled pressure of the pump, thus meeting the claim language of the instant invention. Because the prior art devices are pumps that transfer fluids to a sprayer, they are fully capable of transporting paint to a paint sprayer.

Conclusion

5. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
